TRAINING OVERVIEW

Every time people get to hear the word 'audit', they become nervous. Undergoing an IT audit is beneficial to a company; it is an important element of a strong and adequate IT management. After an IT audit, the auditor will recommend a strategic business action related to external and internal IT processes and systems.

An IT audit is among the most useful tools available for the management in protecting their information assets and in ensuring that their IT systems are operating effectively. However, an IT audit is not meant to guarantee that an entity is complying with the IT standards. Rather, IT audit will help protect the organization from the risks associated in an IT system. Furthermore, areas of inefficiencies within the company's system will be identified; hence time and money will be saved.
